LIBRARY JOURNAL* ANNOUNCES THE BEST SCI-TECH BOOKS OF 2010

New York, New York, December 17, 2010— New York, New York, December 22, 2010—Greg Sapp, LJ's 25-year veteran science reviewer and dean of library and media services at Evergreen State College, WA, has once again named the best science and technology books of the year. For 2010's list, he delivers 34 titles from across a multitude of scientific studies.

“Sapp’s picks are as rich and varied as the literature itself. Ranging from ‘big science’ endeavors like the Human Genome Project to saving endangered species, stemming global warming, and studying cancer, his list offers ample opportunities for education and entertainment,” says Heather McCormack, Library Journal Book Review Editor.

The complete list appears below; for a synopsis and details about each book, go to <http://bit.ly/ggvfSC>.
