Junior Library Guild To Introduce Ebooks at American Library Association Tradeshow

June 26, 2014—LAS VEGAS, NV—Junior Library Guild(JLG) will roll out a new ebook product for libraries across the country tomorrow at the annual tradeshow for the American Library Association. Live demonstrations of the product will be conducted in booth 829.

JLG's easy-to-use ebook product is unique in that, just like its subscription-based print book program, JLG ebooks are chosen by our editors and arranged into categories. Libraries receive one new ebook per month for each category they order. JLG chooses only the best of the best ebooks and honors them by making them a JLG selection.

Four categories are currently available: Science, Technology, Engineering and Math for grades 3-5 and grades 6-8 and Social Sciences for grades 3-5 and grades 6-8. All selections for these categories are available for unlimited simultaneous users within a school. In addition, backlist selections are also available for purchase.

“For 85 years, our customers have entrusted us to take the guesswork out of choosing which newly published print books were worth including in their library,” said Randall Asmo, president and CEO of Media Source, Inc., parent company of JLG. “Today we are extending that expertise with the premiere of our ebook product bringing the service, selection, and convenience of JLG to any library in all formats.”

Features of JLG ebooks include the ability to read online or offline on Mac, PC, iPad, or Android devices and all the usual functionality, like the ability to take notes, bookmark, or highlight text. Ebooks are accessed via clickable links in catalog records—provided free of charge with all ebook orders. For more information, visit juniorlibraryguild.com/ebooks or call 1.800.491.0174.
